The diagram below illustrates the systems that we felt were either essential or desirable for a new system to be able to link to while the colours show the dependency of the library on them.

The following key applies:

- Yellow denotes the systems which are mission critical
- Pink shows the systems that are desired as they will create efficiencies, but are not mission critical
- Blue identifies nice to have systems that would enhance the user experience