Weds 22 October
Mikron Theatre Company produce 'Troupers'

It's 1914. British entertainment is down on its uppers. Actor-manager Lena Ashwell (OBE) has a theatre but no audience. So she assembles a motley bunch of 'turns' and books a tour with a difference. For her TROUPERS won't tread the boards of Old Blighty but the muddy, bloody fields of France. Twice nightly, we're here all week, if we're here at all!

In a little-told story of the Great War, TROUPERS brings to life the amazingly audacious Concerts At The Front – a hitherto unsung war effort that's full of guts, gusto and greasepaint.

Who better to present this story than modern-day troubadours, Mikron?

Heritage Quay will host meetings of Huddersfield Local History Society and other bodies, as well as an extensive range of events and activities (many free).
